

Introducing the Maryland Maternal Health Resource Map

MDMOM is excited to introduce the Maryland Maternal Health Resource Map, an interactive tool designed to help pregnant and postpartum people and their families locate essential services and support in Maryland. This user-friendly map displays a comprehensive range of resources available in communities across the state, including birthing hospitals, home visiting programs, WIC clinics, lactation support, legal assistance, and much more. All of the resources available on the map have been reviewed to confirm they offer the services listed and where applicable have licensed and credentialed human resources. The map is available at mdmomresources.org

Developed at the recommendation and in collaboration with the Maryland Maternal Health Innovation Task Force, the Resource Map is part of the Maryland Maternal Health Innovation program \(MDMOM\), a collaboration between Johns Hopkins University, the Maryland Department of Health, and the Maryland Patient Safety Center, funded by the Health Resources and Services Administration.

Resources listed on the map have been verified and confirmed to be offering the services listed and, where applicable, with licensed and credentialed human resources at the time of the last update noted below. The listing of resources and services on the map does not represent a recommendation or an endorsement by the Johns Hopkins University, the Maryland Department of Health, or the Maryland Patient Safety Center.

How You Can Help

We are calling on our partners to support us in promoting this valuable resource by:

- Sharing these social media posts and graphics on your platforms.
- Publishing information about the Maryland Maternal Health Resource Map in your newsletters.
- Sharing our website, mdmomresources.org, with patients, providers, local organizations, community members, colleagues, and other relevant individuals in your network who can help spread the word.

Together, we can ensure that all Maryland families have access to the care they deserve.
